Prisoners Sunday

A Hopeful Grieving

Grief follows the loss of a loved one as surely and naturally as night follows day. Grief is one of the strongest emotions we will ever experience. Many people have a problem about expressing grief, and may try to suppress it. To suppress grief is dangerous, and can result in serious emotional problems.

To live fruitfully after the death of a loved one, people need to go through a period of mourning. The way to deal with grief is not to run away from it, or pretend it isn't there, but to face it and work through it with as much honesty and courage as one can.

Those who do this will emerge enriched as persons. Grief has a great purgative value. God cannot fill the soul until it is emptied of trivial concerns. And grief is a tremendous bonfire in which all the trash of life is consumed.

Faith should not be used as a barrier against grief. Sometimes people say about someone who does not grieve, 'What great faith he (she) has!' But even Christ grieved. To grieve over the loss of a loved one is a good and necessary thing.

While faith doesn't do away with the necessity of grieving, it is a wonderful comfort and support at the time of death. Paul says 'We believe that Jesus Christ died and rose again, and that it will be the same for those who have died in Christ... Comfort one another with these thoughts.' Faith doesn't dispense us from grieving. What it does do is enable us to grieve with hope.

We mustn't be afraid to cry, to let ourselves go. It's part of the healing. We have tears in our eyes but hope in our hearts. If we do the work of grief, we will wake up one morning, liberated and full of energy for life.

The wedding feast to which Jesus invites us will be all the more joyful for those who have walked through the dark valley of grief, and emerged with the lamp of love still burning brightly.

New Pilgrim Path Website of the Week.

In 1923, on a geological expedition deep in the Ordos Desert of Mongolia, the newly ordained priest, Pierre Teilhard de Chardin, pondered his obligation to offer a daily celebration of the mass – but how to do so in the middle of the desert, with neither bread nor wine available to him? His solution: the whole earth would become his altar, with the human toil and sufferings of the day to be offered up as his bread and wine. The result of this profound reflection is his “The Mass on the World, a mystical expression of the presence and activity of God in all creation.
