

New Pilgrim Path Website of the Week

"Utterly at home, God dwells in us forever", wrote the mediaeval mystic, Julian of Norwich. In meditation, we can be at home with God in the same place. Within ourselves, we can find the place where we are loved, where we are held, where we are constantly refreshed. Liz Watson of the ecumenical World Community of Christian Meditation describes how the practice of daily meditation opens the door of our heart, allowing us to enter our inner room, our deepest self and come home to the One who is at home in us.
