"Somewhere, out at the edges, the light is turning... and the freed air goes wild with light... May I live this day compassionate of heart, clear in word, gracious in awareness, courageous in thought, generous in love." These are the words of the late, great Irish poet, philosopher and writer, John O'Donohue, in a short and truly uplifting memorial video. Watch it at: www.newpilgrimpath.ie.

The Cost of Following Christ

Following Christ is not always easy. Faith can bring joy, peace and hope, but it can also challenge the way people think, speak and live. At times, being faithful means choosing a path different from the one taken by others.

Christian discipleship is more than simply believing in Jesus. It means allowing his teaching to shape everyday life. It means putting love before selfishness, forgiveness before resentment, generosity before greed and truth before convenience. Such choices can involve sacrifice.

The temptation is to think that a good Christian life should always be comfortable. Yet faith is not about avoiding every difficulty. Jesus reminds his followers that there is a cost to discipleship. Taking up the cross means being prepared to give something of ourselves for God and others.

This does not mean seeking suffering for its own sake. Rather, it means recognising that genuine love will sometimes demand patience, courage and self-sacrifice. Parents, families, friends and neighbours experience this in ordinary ways every day.

The challenge is to ask what truly matters. Success, possessions and recognition cannot provide lasting fulfilment. What matters ultimately is becoming the person God calls us to be.

Following Christ may involve difficult choices, but it is a path that leads to deeper freedom, purpose and life. The cross is not the end of the journey; beyond it lies the promise of resurrection.
