John O'Donohue famously argued that "the greatest sin is the un-lived life". In a powerful one-hour talk on "Imagination as the Path of Spirit", he urges the need to enter fully into our own lives, becoming all that we are capable of becoming – so that "when the time comes for us to lie down and die, we will be able to look back on a life that took honourable risks, that pushed its own frontiers, that tried to look after its own healing...that was compassionate, that didn't judge, and that tried to look after the poor and neglected, and the unspoken for." Requests for Help

It has come to our attention that from time to time people at the Church are being asked for financial assistance. This behaviour is not condoned. If you receive requests for help it is preferable that individuals are guided to the St. Vincent de Paul.

Twenty Third Sunday in Ordinary Time Year A, 6th September 2026. Bulletin No: 1635.

Called to Care for One Another

Faith is never meant to be lived in isolation. We are part of a community, and that means having a responsibility for one another. Sometimes that responsibility is easy: offering encouragement, sharing someone's joy, or being present when life is difficult. At other times, it can be much harder.

There are moments when someone needs to be challenged because their choices are causing harm to themselves or others. The Gospel reminds us that such conversations should never come from anger, pride or a desire to judge. They should come from genuine concern and a desire to help another person find a better path. Speaking the truth with kindness is an important part of Christian love.

At the same time, there is a warning against becoming too quick to see the faults of others while overlooking our own. Correction must always be accompanied by humility, patience and compassion.

Christian community also means learning to forgive. Relationships can be difficult, and misunderstandings will happen, but reconciliation is always worth pursuing. When people gather in Christ's name with sincere hearts, something greater than themselves is present.

The challenge is to build communities where people feel supported rather than condemned, encouraged rather than discouraged, and where truth and love are held together. In such communities, faith can grow and God's presence can be recognised.
